

DAPING YANG

BAS Hons IN ACCOUNTING, 2010

Daping graduate from York with an honours degree in accounting in 2010. Indeed, she was on the Dean's Honours List. In recognition of her skills, capabilities and commitment to her profession she was offered a summer internship in the Finance Department of KPMG's Toronto office. After graduating she returned to KPMG as a first-year staff accountant and is currently working with financial institution sector clients. She is also looking forward to sitting for her CA examinations very soon.

Thinking back to her years at York one of the most challenging times was choosing whether to major in Finance or Accounting. She enjoyed both subjects and subsequently gained professional experience in both. She enrolled in the accounting programme and enjoyed every minute of her studies. In her free time she enjoys cooking, cycling and playing with her dog, April.

Favourite book and why?

The book that I love the most is A Christmas Carol by Charles Dickens. I received this book as a Christmas gift in 2006. It was very special to me. I was able to get my first glimpse of western culture and started my journey in Canada after reading the novel from cover to cover for the first time in my life.

What are your future ambitions?

I have found the perfect 'gift' in being able to work for my current employer where I have met some incredible people who have helped me to develop as a person and a professional in my field. I would like to pursue further professional and personal development by continuing to work alongside them.
